this week.

Lasalle

Starting today with Viola Dana in "Cinderella's Twin" the LaSalle will during the week present a number of attractions of extraordinary merit with a preponderance of comedy drama. The one notable exception will be Irvin Willat's tremendous melodrama of the sea, "Partners of the Tide," which in massiveness of production and punches of excitement far exceed the producer's former masterpieces. "Below the Surface" and "Behind the Door," ships sink or are burned, might fight at the bottom of the sea, and other thrilling events abound in this great drama which will be shown Thursday and Friday.

Viola Dana in "Cinderella's Twin" means thrills, laughs, appeal, and the chance to see the sauciest of stars in her latest picture. Betty Blythe, probably the most strikingly beautiful woman of the screen and certainly one of the best gowned, is the featured player in "The Truant Husband" which holds the screen on Monday and Tuesday. The story, a feature comedy of a man vamped against his will, was written by Albert Payson Terhune, the great magazine writer, and includes in its cast besides Miss Blythe such well known players as Mahlon Hamilton and Francella Billington. A New York critic said that it was "the best feature comedy ever thrown on the screen."

Gowns, negligees, lingerie—in fact, whole outfits designed and executed under the eye of Penrhyn Stanlaws, the great artist, furnish the wardrobe worn by beautiful Wanda Hawley in "The Outside Woman," a racy farce built from Philip Bartholomae's famous success, "All Night Long." Next Saturday the old favorite, Marmarita Fisher, will be shown in "The Light Woman."

Castle

William Fairbanks, the dare-devil of all western players, is going to start off the week at the Castle with a thrilling whop and hurrah in his sensational drama of fights and frolics, "Fighting Bill," one of the most exciting western stories ever filmed and being shown today only. In order to balance the week, a still greater sensation is in store for next Saturday when Irvin V. Willat's melodrama of the sea, ships, submarines, divers, villains, heroes, fair maids, fire, and so on, "Partners of the Tide," will be shown. Film fans will remember Willat as the creator of the success and inspiring "Below the Surface and Behind the Door." "Partners of the Tide" is said to be infinitely superior to those popular successes.

Viola Dana in "Cinderella's Twin," Betty Blythe in "The Truant Husband" and Wanda Hawley in "The Outside Woman" will furnish a week full of comedy, drama and beauty, with stories by famous authors to keep the audiences absorbed. "Cinderella's Twin," Miss Dana's latest and the Monday and Tuesday attraction at the Castle, was written by Luther Reed, co-author of "Dear Me." "The Truant Husband," which holds forth on Wednesday with Miss Blythe, Mahlon Hamilton and Francella Billington in the cast, is from the typewriter of Albert Payson Terhune, while "The Outside Woman" is but the movie name for Philip Bartholomae's huge stage success, "All Night Long." In that film Miss Hawley appears in costumes designed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, the famous artist.

Auditorium

Today at the Auditorium, Lester Cuneo makes his initial appearance in his first five-reel western production "Lone Hand Wilson." A powerful drama of the great west. Also the seventh episode of the most sensational serial ever produced, "Pantomax." "Doing Time" is a funny comedy with Snub Pollard, and Pathe News completes the bill. William Farnum, often termed as the screen's most versatile actor, is to be seen Monday and Tuesday in his latest Fox super-special, "I Were King," a story made famous on the stage by E. H. Sothern and written for him by Justin Huntly McCarthy, the English author. A stirring story of a vagabond who becomes the great man of France. Truly a massive production from every angle. "Roaring Lions on Parade" is a funny Sunshine comedy and Town Topics completes the bill.

William Russell the rugged and romantic star of the William Fox forces, makes his appearance Wednesday and Thursday in his latest release entitled "The Challenge of the Law." The fierce passions of the north are revealed in a story wholesome and intense with a hero who overcomes overwhelming odds. "Won by a Nose" is a clever Snub Pollard comedy and Fox News is also shown.

"Partners of Fate," showing at the Auditorium Friday is said to be an extraordinary story with an unusual role and to this role Miss Louise Lovely measures up fully. A highly dramatic story showing how one's whole destiny is hinged upon the slightest incident. George Seligman, and Philo McCullough are in the cast. Also the fourth chapter of "The Son of Tarzan," the amazing Jungle romance by Edgar Rice Burroughs, will be shown. Fox News completes the show.

Would Buy Spot Where Kentucky Song Is Penned

Gov. Morrow Asks Sons of Bluegrass State Help Purchase Mansion.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 2.—Gov. Edwin P. Morrow today issued a proclamation calling upon "fond expatriates from the Kentucky soil that gave them birth" to contribute to a fund for the purchase and preservation of Federal Hill, the ante-bellum Kentucky mansion where Stephen C. Foster wrote "My Old Kentucky Home, Goodnight."

Federal Hill lies about a mile from Bardonia, which is 25 miles south of Louisville. The governor's proclamation was said to be unique among state documents, both because of its subject, now almost a national anthem, and its extra-territorial character.

It recites, in part:
"To every expatriate from Kentucky in all the world:
"At Federal Hill, a homestead and estate, near Bardonia, Ky., Stephen C. Foster wrote and composed that most loved and famous of all American songs, 'My Old Kentucky Home, Goodnight.' The homestead and surroundings still remain essentially as they were in that summer time of 1852, when 'The corns were ripe and the meadows were in bloom,' and as they were in 1795, when the mansion was built.

Is Under Option.
"The place is under option to be purchased by popular subscription in Kentucky, to be converted into a historic shrine to perpetuate the glory of the song, the memory of the great American composer and the universal desire to honor its consecrated associations. It is to be maintained and protected, when acquired, under the authority and control of the state.
"Now, therefore, I, Edwin P. Morrow, governor of the commonwealth, do make and send this proclamation, with greetings, to all fond expatriates from the Kentucky soil, that gave them birth; to the children of such as have passed on and left behind the heritage of pride in their origin; and to those who have listened to that song of home under the shadow of other hills, the sunlight of other plains or beneath the quite stars of alien skies, and who have felt the thrill of its deathless beauty and pathos.

"You also are privileged and invited to join with the sons and daughters of Kentucky in a contribution to this fund, which shall be used alone to preserve the home of the song that is your song and our song.

"Given under my hand as governor of the commonwealth, this 2d day of April, 1921."

THIS IS A FOUL STORY.

FREMONT, O., April 2.—Dan Rooney's sow killed all of her pigs but one. The piggy ran under a hen, chasing her chicks away. Now the hen mothers it and refuses to take back her chicks.

TOWN WITHOUT AUTOS.

ISLEBORO, Me., April 2.—Town council has banned the auto. Only one was ever brought to this island. Horses and some human who had never seen one before were greatly excited. This is a summer resort and vacationists like to sleep late.

AND LAKE HAS NO TIDE.

DETROIT, Mich., April 2.—John Thormallewick bought a farm. Paid $1,500 cash for it. Two agents said it was worth much more. It was located two miles out in Lake St. Clair.
